Following the sell-out success of A Gamble With Death and A Melody For Murder in 2017, Richard Alexander and Alex Farthing are back with A Dish To Die For - a brand new, interactive, real-life Cluedo-like Murder Mystery Treasure Hunt that will be played out on the streets of Reading in February 2018. Teams or individuals can take part in the hunt for the murderer in a three-hour, immersive scavenger hunt around the Town Centre. Using their smartphones, players must race around the streets of Reading to find hidden evidence, crack cryptic clues and converse with characters to catch the killer – against the clock.

The game centres around the murder of chef Amelia Cook, Reading's newest Gourmet Sensation. In a professional kitchen, execution is everything. Amelia was launching her exclusive Five Star Fare Menu but while the public tucked into the new dish, it was crunch time for Amelia – as she became the main corpse. The killer remains at large somewhere in Reading. Scotland Yard suspects foul play, they and need your help.

Creators Richard Alexander and Alex Farthing are promising their third mystery, A Dish To Die For, will be bigger, bolder and even more murderous. Imagine the crystal maze, escape room puzzles, a scavenger hunt, a team of live actors, your smartphone and a murder mystery got together - with a timer. Clues are hidden all around the town, in partnership with local businesses and inside iconic Reading locations!

This new concept sees players working as solo sleuths or as teams of intrepid detectives searching the streets and uniquely allows them to discover hidden gems around the town, explore Reading's history and crack the case in an intriguing new way. Save 10% on tickets using the discount code: TOOMANYCOOKS.

A Dish To Die For runs at 12pm and 3pm on Saturdays in February 2018 (3rd, 10th, 17th and 24th February). Tickets are £20 from www.adishtodiefor.com. Find us across all social media using #WhoKilledAmeliaCook.
